Welcome and General Information

On behalf of my colleagues and our students in the World Literature Program at Simon Fraser University, it’s my pleasure to welcome you to Vancouver and ACLA 2011. Our theme, “Comparative Literature / World Literature,” is a call to continue doing what Comparative Literature has always done best: exploring intercultural encounter by taking advantage of the expanding range of available methods and approaches. As we put together this year’s program, we were struck by the astonishing variety of work on the part of scholars hailing from an increasingly wide range of countries. In more than 170 seminars, comparatists are exploring literatures, genres and methods that were barely on the map of the discipline a generation ago. This year’s numerous special events, all open to the public, similarly reflect the burgeoning field. A panel of esteemed editors discusses how publishing in Comparative Literature today is different from the past. Another panel explores job opportunities for comparatists beyond academia. We’re particularly delighted to welcome a panel that assesses the ICLA’s ambitious research agenda over the course of the past half-century. It is our honor to host a literary reading and a multilingual poetry slam, as well as an all-star panel of Canadian artists and writers. Our concerns and hopes for the future of the profession are expressed in a panel that addresses the current crisis in the humanities, and also in our sponsorship of the first academic seminar for undergraduates. On that note, we have an opportunity to see an avant-premier of the PBS series “Invitation to World Literature,” aimed at bringing literature to a wider world audience. Finally, we have two evening events to top off this year’s theme: Haun Saussy’s Presidential Address, entitled “Interplanetary Literature,” and the Plenary Discussion between Gayatri Chakravorty Spivak and David Damrosch on the topic of “Comparative Literature / World Literature.”

This year’s meeting is the product of a great deal of cooperation and good will among ACLA organizers, Simon Fraser University staff members and hotel personnel. It is also the product of academics who are not accustomed to organizing events for upwards of 1500 participants. Every effort has been made to avoid taxing your patience but we hope you’ll let us know if you face any difficulties. Just say, Klahowya, Klahowyum, which in the region’s Chinook Jargon meant “please help me” or “I’m miserable” but was reportedly so often used by White settlers that it came to be taken as a standard greeting!

--Ken Seigneurie

BUSINESS MEETING: All members of the ACLA are invited to the annual business meeting, which will take place during lunch on Friday. This meeting will include a brief presentation regarding important changes in the ACLA, including the new dues and governance structures, as well as the transition of the ACLA Secretariat from its current home at UT Austin (where it has been located since 2002) to its new location (beginning in the summer of 2011) at the University of South Carolina, Columbia. Since for some years the conference has outgrown the capacity of any single space, we shall break the business meeting into two. Both business meetings will take place simultaneously on Friday in the Fairmont Pacific Ballroom and in the Hyatt, Regency C Room. We invite you to attend the meeting in the hotel where your seminar is taking place. Participants whose sessions take place at the Wosk Centre are invited to attend whichever they prefer. The business meeting will include a light lunch of gourmet sandwiches, drinks, etc. for the first 200 people who arrive at each location.

GRADUATE STUDENT RECEPTION: A Graduate Student Reception has been organized for Friday evening in the Grouse and Stanley Rooms of the Hyatt Hotel. This reception has become a tradition at the ACLA and allows our student members to interact with each other in an informal setting.

BANQUET: The festive banquet and awards presentation on Saturday evening will begin at 8:30 in the Pacific Ballroom of the Fairmont Hotel. It will follow the plenary discussion between Drs. Gayatri Chakravorty Spivak and David Damrosch in the nearby British Ballroom.

BREAKFAST AND COFFEE BREAKS: As part of the conference registration fee, each participant is invited to enjoy pastries and coffee/tea before the first stream of seminars on all three days of the conference at one of the two hosting hotels. Because the conference is divided amongst several venues, we are asking participants to take breakfast in the venue in which they will be presenting or hearing papers. Presenters whose sessions take place in the Wosk Centre are invited to select either hotel. Both host hotels will also continue coffee and tea service in the break between Stream A and Stream B seminars until 10:30 AM.

BOOK EXHIBIT: The book exhibit will be located in the Hyatt Hotel in the Balmoral Room. The exhibit is open 4:00-8:00 PM on Thursday, 8:30 AM -5:00 PM on Friday and Saturday.

AUDIO-VISUAL SUPPORT: We regret that we are unable to honor late requests, given the cost of rental. In those cases where A/V support was requested by our deadline, we have provided a dataprojector and a screen. Participants are reminded that they should bring their own mini-speakers if they wish to use audio. Additionally, Mac users should bring their own adapters to connect to the dataprojectors, since each model has a different adapter.

Acknowledgments

As in 2007, when we met in Puebla, Mexico, this year the American Comparative Literature Association shows that it takes “American” in the inclusive sense. Starting from the papers and panels proposed by our membership around the theme “World Literature, Comparative Literature,” the Program Committee, led by Professor Ken Seigneurie, has built up a vast and various conference. This is never easy. The work of organization drew extraordinary effort from the ACLA Secretariat and our local hosts. Professor Elizabeth Richmond-Garza, Billy Fatzinger, Maryam Shariati, and Fatma Tarlaci, as well as Professor Seigneurie and Nevenka Stankovic, put in untold hours of work synthesizing and correcting the seemingly endless details. I offer sincere thanks to our hosting hotels, the Fairmont Hotel and the Hyatt Regency Vancouver; Tiffany Tibbetts and Katherine Yip have been particularly helpful. Thanks also go to our other host in Vancouver, Robert Payne at the Morris J Wosk Centre for Dialogue, Simon Fraser University. We are grateful moreover to President Andrew Petter of Simon Fraser University, to John Craig, Dean, Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences, and to Heather Dawkins, Associate Dean (2005-09), Faculty of Arts and Sciences, for their academic hospitality.

Comparative Literature

The official journal of the American Comparative Literature Association
George E. Rowe, editor
Published quarterly

The oldest US journal in its field, Comparative Literature publishes wide-ranging scholarly articles that address significant problems in literary theory and explore important issues of literary history that are not confined to a single national literature.

Individual membership in the ACLA includes a subscription to Comparative Literature. Students can subscribe for $28.

The Yearbook of Comparative Literature

YCL is dedicated to the publication of theoretically informed research in literary studies with a comparative, intercultural, or interdisciplinary emphasis.

UPCOMING ISSUE: VOLUME 55 – THE END OF A WORLD

This volume comprises a number of very distinguished contributors (among whom are Alain Badiou, Shoshana Felman, Francois Jullien, Svetlana Boym, Biodun Jeyifo, Giuseppe Mazzotta, and others) who articulate from the perspective of several disciplines – literary criticism, Psychoanalysis, Philosophy, Political science – the very problem of a contemporary thinking of the universality in man and of a world in common. The debate prompts a variety of questions such as what is the world for contemporary philosophy, and what is the significance of world literature for contemporary literary thinking?

A further study of these concepts examines what it means for a world to come to an end, and asks what is a world and what kind of end are we talking about?

The precise significance of the concept "world" seems to involve two fundamental dimensions. The dimension of totality - the world is the realm of everything - and that of commonality - those who inhabit the world have a commonality of inhabiting the sharing the same world. A further term to add to the mix is that of universality, thus of something that can be attributed to everyone, with no exception, and which marks the fact, beyond any particularity and difference, of their being the same in relation to that totality which they inhabit. The possibility of such a common world, of a totality of existence and a universality in which everybody participates has been increasingly felt over the last few centuries as being no longer tenable, perhaps even empty, and thus as having come to an end. At the same time, this moment of ending has also saw attempts to develop new ways of thinking about the possibility of a world, a commonality of everyone, and the dimension of universality in man. Such attempts are perhaps no more frequent than in our own times, in which the ending and loss of the world is experienced with great alarm. The end, in the sense of aim of the achievement of a world, a world thought in a new way, increasingly seems to be one of our most urgent tasks.

ACL(x) is a small, ACLA-sponsored, fall conference designed to encourage experimentation and innovation in the field of Comparative Literature. For 2011, under the theme, "Exchange," ACL(x) aims to explore new possibilities for the production and distribution of scholarly knowledge in the conference setting—"new" in (for instance) format, technological basis, mode of participation, or output. Presenters will eschew the usual three-person panels, roundtables, and keynotes in favor of structured debates, technology-mediated presentations, TED-style talks, and a variety of other forms.

ACL(x) 2011 will be held at Penn State University, September 29–October 1, 2011. Registration is free.

See http://compit.psu.edu/aclx.html for directions, the conference schedule, and other details, or email inquiries to aclx@psu.edu.

Call for Seminar Proposals and Papers
ACLA 2012

Providence, RI, March 29-April 1, 2012
“Collapse/Catastrophe/Change”

“there is a hollow murmuring underground; a confused movement is felt that threatens a general earthquake in the political world.”

Edmund Burke, Reflections on the Revolution in France

“enforced uniformity, sooner or later, is the greatest occasion of civil war”

Roger Williams, founder of Rhode Island

From the Lisbon earthquake of 1755 to 9/11 to the recent upheavals in the Middle East, the language of collapse and catastrophe, of crisis and change has come to dominate the public sphere. What figures and tropes produce and recuperate such events? How have they been represented differently in different periods and across linguistic and national boundaries? Economic meltdown, financial collapse, environmental depletion and disaster, trauma, the crisis in the humanities, in the foreign languages, in comparative literature itself: we are besieged by a discourse of crisis. At the same time, discourse itself seems to be in crisis, on the brink of collapse from the strain of having to reinvent itself with each new cataclysm without becoming redundant or incommensurate. What remains of terms like “revolution,” “democracy,” “justice,” “tragedy,” “community,” “freedom”? How are they mediated culturally? nationally? globally? Can the literary re-imagine so as to renew? What is the relation between figuration and change?

We invite proposals and submissions on comparative topics addressing such issues and their representation in texts, film and other media for seminars of from eight to twelve persons or individual paper proposals which should be submitted via the "Propose a Paper or Seminar" link at the ACLA conference website: http://www.acla.org/acla2012

Seminar Proposal Deadline: October 1, 2011
Deadline for Paper Proposals: November 1, 2011
